Who Made Up The Church Before The Restoration Movement?

T. Doy Moyer

Question: The restoration movement began in the early 1800's. From that came the Church of Christ. Before that who made up the church? I am a devout member of the Church of Christ and I just want to know how to answer this question in line with the Word. Thank You.

Response: First, I want to comment on the first couple of sentences in the question. "The restoration movement began in the early 1800's. From that came the Church of Christ." May I kindly say that this is not a correct way of stating the point; and once we understand something about the church of Christ, the answer to the question will be obvious.

To say, "from that came the 'Church of Christ" is to put the church into the framework of a denomination. It is to imply that the church of Christ had its beginnings in the restoration movement. If one is looking at a denomination called the "Church of Christ" (and such does exist), then perhaps the point would be legitimate. However, if a denomination called the "Church of Christ" does now exist as a result of the restoration movement, then it is unscriptural and ought to cease to exist, for we can fine no biblical support for the existence of a denomination, no matter what name it uses.

Biblically understood, the "church of Christ" is simply a group or body of people who belong to Christ. It is not a title, and the Bible nowhere uses it as such. Though "churches of Christ" is used (Romans 6:16), it is not used exclusively, and then is simply descriptive of congregations that belonged to Christ. Other descriptions are used also: church of God at Corinth (1Corinthians 1:2); church of the Thessalonians (2 Thessalonians 1:1); church of the firstborn ones (Hebrews 12:23), etc. Clearly, there is no one single title given for all congregations. Therefore, to use the phrase "Church of Christ" as a denominational, exclusive title is without authority and should be abandoned. I cringe when I hear terminology such as "Church of Christ preacher" or "I'm a Church of Christer," etc. It is patently unbiblical and reveals a denominational mindset.

It should be noted that the efforts in the "restoration movement" were not intended to create a new denomination known as the "Church of Christ." My understanding is that they were trying to get away from that kind of thing so they could just be Christians. This should be our goal always.

To the bottom-line question: Who made up the church before this? The same ones who have always made up the church: those who, by faith, have committed themselves to Christ through obedience to His will (Hebrews 5:9). Just because we do not have a historical record of Christians throughout the centuries does not mean they didn't exist. I would like to think that there has always been a "remnant" of God's people, even during the years that Catholicism had a strangle-hold on the populace.

The requirements for salvation did not change with the American restoration movement. Anyone, living at any given time this side of Christ, could have been or can be just Christians by going to the Scriptures to be and do what first century Christians did under the guidance and oversight of Jesus and the apostles. When one obeys the gospel, the Lord adds this person to His body of saved people who make up the "general assembly and church of the firstborn who are enrolled in heaven" (Hebrews 12:23). Then, God desires that we join ourselves to a local group of Christians as we carry out His will (cf. Hebrews 10:23-24). In doing this, we should make sure that such a group is practicing truth according to the Bible, working and worshiping in line with the scriptural guidelines. This is the way that we, as individuals, can worship God in spirit and in truth (John 4:24).

Just because a local group calls itself a "Church of Christ" does not guarantee its faithfulness, and this is demonstrable. So, that phrase is not some kind of biblical litmus test for soundness. I do not believe that a congregation that is committed to God's word will call themselves something foreign to Scripture, or identify themselves with some peculiar man, denomination, or doctrine. But ultimately, a congregation is recognized as faithful by the Lord through her holding fast to Him and His will (cf. Revelation 2:8-11, 3:7-13).

Today, if we will hold fast to Christ and His will,

He will judge us as faithful. In the end, this is all that really matters.

"God and Country"

Russ Bowman

I feel very blessed to have been born both in this place and in this time. I love my country (and my state even more, but that's another thought) and am proud to sing our national anthem and pledge my allegiance to the United States of America. Those of us who are Christians enjoy what has been a rare privilege in history, for we have the opportunity to inject our perspectives and convictions into the great societal expression that shapes the policies and decisions of our government. And participation in that process is neither wrong, nor inappropriate. But what seems to be happening in recent years raises some concerns in my mind. Perhaps what I am seeing is merely a reflection of my own historical naivety. I've never been a real "political creature" in my life. Oh, I have opinions and I vote and have been involved ever since I reached eighteen. But such involvement has been minimal. Now, however, I'm sneaking up on 50, with three daughters to finish raising and educating. I give a bit more thought to the economy, health care and political issues.

There is a tremendous amount of political discussion among Christians these days. Casual conversations. Social networking sites. Town hall meetings and tea parties. Even Bible classes. What's happening in our government is clearly on the minds of God's people. And, I reiterate, this is not in itself wrong. But I would voice these concerns for all of those souls in turmoil over the present state of the United States.

Christians are citizens of the kingdom of heaven (Philippians 3:20; John 18:36). We are strangers, so-journers, resident aliens in the United States (1 Peter 2:11). And while my physical nativity permits me to throw in my "two cents worth" as I pass through, let us remember who we are and whose we are. Certainly we can involve ourselves in temporal government and use such to our best advantage. The Lord respected such (Matthew 22:15) and Paul exercised his rights as a Roman citizen (Acts 16:37f; 25:10f). But the Lord is our King, regardless of what happens in this country. He reigns, and my focus is to be first and foremost upon His kingdom, no matter the form or nature of civil government under which I live. My affections, concerns and responsibilities as a citizen of the kingdom of heaven will not change with the uncertainties of temporal government.

Secondly, would that Christians would approach the promotion of the kingdom of heaven with as much passion, diligence, and interest as some exhibit in the promotion of their conservative political agenda. It's sad when we will show up at a town hall meeting, but not at a gospel meeting. It's detrimental to the cause of Christ when we will try boldly to convert a political opponent, but not a sinner. It's disconcerting that we spend more time listening to Fox News than studying the Good News. It's reprehensible when we worry more, talk more, work more for the United States than for the Kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, it is a dangerous thing to see Christians dividing over political ideology. Politics is a convoluted arena. The admixture of economic issues, social concerns, civil rights, national defense, legal matters, benevolence, moral issues, and a host of other elements make political loyalty problematic for every child of God. Who does not face some kind of dilemma in his ideology? I do not know one Christian who is serious about his/her discipleship that does not struggle with such matters. But it is a grievous issue when we begin to form our loyalties on the basis of political activity rather than on the basis of our common faith. Paul told the Galatians (Galatians 3:28) and the Colossians (Colossians 3:11) that all temporal distinctions are to be discounted within the family of Christ - "you are all one in Christ." Heaven forbid that we include Democrat and Republican in those lists. Do we really believe that those aspects of society that separate various political views are more serious and divisive than were the differences between the Jew and the Gentile or between the slave and the free? How can we put politics before the brotherhood?

Finally, and perhaps this is at the root of all of the above, we need to remember that civil government is not the answer to the problems that we face in our society.

Can our government influence such? Without a doubt. But the moral deterioration that we see in our world is not going to be arrested and reversed by congressional legislation, Supreme Court verdicts, or presidential agendas. When individuals become more godly and influence those around them toward the respect and promotion of God Almighty, then and only then will our world change. And the government will change with it. Read the parable of the mustard seed and that of the leaven (Matthew 13:31-33). If we're going to be passionate about a government, then let's be passionate about God's government.

Did I mention that I love my country?
