The Rich Man & Lazarus: Jesus' Christmas Carol

George Hutto

You should know that Jesus spoke about what happens to souls after death, which is our most authoritative source on the subject. After all, Jesus arose from the dead to prove His knowledge of Paradise, Hades, and other such otherworldly things. Therefore, consider that Dickens' novel and the Bible are not equal. Dickens wrote A Christmas Carol because he was in a financial bind, while Jesus gave us the divine message of the Rich Man for the salvation of souls. Dickens' Christmas Carol is an endearing story of redemption, of generosity and love for our fellow man. Jesus' warning of Hell for the spiritually negligent is from the perennial best-seller, the Bible, particularly, Luke 16:19-31.

The Rich Man "fared sumptuously every day," gave no concern for beggars like Lazarus, and did not bother to read the writings of "Moses and the prophets." Lazarus, on the other hand, was poor and miserable, but obviously a devoutly religious man who found a place in Abraham's embrace after death. The conversation between the Rich Man (we are not even given his name) and Abraham are at the core of the story.

The Bad News First. Death is a place of torment for the unfaithful. The Rich Man sought only a drop of cold water to cool his tongue – "for I am tormented in this flame." But he was given nothing. All hope of comfort was gone. Abraham explained that, even if he wanted to deliver that cool drop of water, there is a great gulf fixed between the tormented and the blessed.

Also, death is a place of separation. The Rich Man thinks of his five brothers back on Earth and how they must hear his word of warning, "lest they come to this place of torment." This request was also denied, and Abraham pointed him to the Scriptures, the very thing he had neglected in his opulent lifestyle. The Rich Man insisted that if word came from him, surely his brothers would believe. But a harsh reality was handed back to him: "Neither will they be persuaded though one rise from the dead."

Another, un-amusing point to be considered with this bad news in

is published in the interest of New Testament Christianity and to enhance the work of the Market Street church.

David A. Cox, Editor

Jesus' account is that there is no hope given for any change, ever. Jesus' story is couched in between warnings against divorce (Luke 16:18) and those who offend "little ones." (Luke 17:1-2) He is talking to people who like to "play hardball;" people who "play for keeps."

All the efforts to get the lost out of Hell do not diminish the finality of Jesus' picture of the Rich Man in torment. Purgatory has a happy ending, if it were true. Baptism by proxy is ingenious, if the Bible taught it. The idea that souls simply stop existing at the Judgment might make God a more just God in the eyes of some, but the Bible just does not teach it, and Jesus' story about the Rich Man teaches otherwise.

"And these will go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into eternal life." (Matthew 25:46)

Medics talk about "a sense of impending doom" experienced by those who are bleeding to death, experiencing a heart attack, or otherwise sense that death is near. Jesus' words in this story are designed specifically to give the lost such a sense of urgency, dependency, and dire need.

The Good News. Surely, Jesus anticipated his own resurrection from the dead when he told His story of "a certain rich man." The resurrection is good news, first, because it assures us that Jesus knew what He was talking about. When the Lord spoke to Nicodemus about being born of water and the spirit, He said, "Most assuredly I say to you, We speak what We know and testify what We have seen..." (John 3:11) Jesus' assurance of the blessedness of the righteous is just as sure as the resurrection. Do you believe?

Second, the resurrection is good news because it reassures us that our salvation is secured by more than simple good works. Ebenezer Scrooge's repentance from greed is a wonderful story, but what about all his past sins? What about his devotion to God who made the spirits? Why did Jesus die in the first place but to atone for our sins!

"And if you call on the Father, who without partiality judges according to each one's work, conduct yourselves throughout the time of your stay here in fear; knowing that you were not redeemed with corruptible things, like silver or gold, from your aimless conduct received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." (1 Peter 1:17-19).

Third, there is good news in the fact that we are given the Rich Man's story on this side of the grave. And, we have not only "Moses and the prophets," but also the entire New Testament, which gives us "the rest of the story." If the Rich Man is lost for his neglect of Moses' message, surely the unrighteous will be lost today for neglecting Christ's message! (Hebrews 10:26-31).

So, repentance is in order! Not just the doing of good deeds, but refraining from evil works (Galatians 5:19-21) and indifference (Matthew 12:30).

Jesus has given us time to confess and to be baptized for remission of sins. That is the story of Saul of Tarsus, a severe Scrooge if ever there was one. "And now why are you waiting? Arise and be baptized, and wash away your sins, calling on the name of the Lord" (Acts 22:16).

Jesus' story is not just for Christmas, and not just for commercialized England, but for all time and all places.

"Then He said to them, 'Thus it is written, and thus it was necessary for the Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem'" (Luke 24:46-47).

"And He said to them, 'Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He who believes and is baptized will be saved; but he who does not believe will be condemned'" (Mark 16:15-16).

Dickens had it right that Scrooge's story was to be finished by Scrooge himself. Jesus made it clear that the Rich Man wrote his own story, as did Lazarus. You and I are writing our own stories, too.

Making The Story Real

George Slover

"Inasmuch as many have taken in hand to set in order a narrative of those things which have been fulfilled among us, just as those who from the beginning were eyewitnesses and ministers of the word delivered them to us, it seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write to you an orderly account, most excellent Theophilus, that you may know the certainty of those things in which you were instructed.” (Luke 1:1-4)

One of my greatest challenges as scribe and preacher is to help the story of Jesus come to life in the hearts of the readers. It was for this very purpose that Luke recorded his account of the incredible life of Jesus.

At the close of the 19th-century skepticism swept over the British Isles. Among the skeptics was a brilliant young scholar by the name of William Ramsay. He was an agnostic who wanted to disprove the accuracy of the Bible.

Sir William Ramsay went to Asia Minor as an archaeologist to disprove Luke’s accuracy. His conclusions are recorded in Josh McDowell’s book, Evidence That Demands a Verdict, pg. 74: “Luke is a historian of the first rank; not merely are his statements of fact trustworthy; he is possessed of the true historic sense... In short, this author should be placed along with the very greatest historians.” Ramsay’s discoveries changed him from skeptic to believer.

The purpose of Luke’s gospel is both literary and spiritual. From the literary viewpoint, Luke sets the life of Jesus within the context of institutions, customs, geography, and historical characters of the time. From the spiritual viewpoint, he plainly presents the person of Jesus Christ as the perfect man and Divine Savior of the world. Jesus really was God in the flesh!

As one reads through Luke’s gospel he must be impressed with the powerful life of Jesus. Luke wants the reader to grasp the authority and graciousness of the master teacher. He presents Jesus as a God who wishes to extend his help, mercy, and love to mankind. The thrilling account of those who witnessed Jesus after his death and resurrection reminds the reader of how much Christ offers.

Have you been moved by Jesus lately? Take time to read the gospel of Luke. It could be a spiritually life-changing experience!
