The Providence of God

David A. Cox

"And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are called according to His purpose" (Romans 8:28)

In this verse, Paul is attesting to the certain fact of the providence of God. Providence is the work God does as the Creator's care and maintenance of the balance of the natural world. Through providence, God is working to provide a result He desires. Though God is acting or working, does not require any action that would violate any of the laws of nature. As individuals, we regularly work to bring a desired result to pass. If we can work things to obtain a desired result without miracles, why can't God do the same? He can!

What is Providence?

The word "providence" is of Latin origin (providentia), which simply means "to foresee." Providence involves God seeing a need or desired result and arranging things to produce the outcome. Paul speaks of providence as he wrote, "all things work together for good." Providence is God working through His provision in the natural and spiritual realms. In working in these realms, God does not violate man's free will, nor is there any violation of natural or spiritual laws.

Examples of Providence in Scripture.

The scriptures record many examples of miracles performed by God. However, there are also many examples of God working providentially, through natural laws, to bring desired results to pass.

- There are many examples of women who were unable to bear children in the Old Testament, and God blessed them and opened their wombs. After this, they were able to conceive and bear children: Sarah (Genesis 21:1), Rebekah (Genesis 25:21), Rachel (Genesis 30:22, and Hannah (1 Samuel 1:5, 20). These women did not conceive through miraculous means. Still, through natural laws and healing, all of these women could conceive, carry, and give birth to children in a natural way.
- In 2 Kings 20:1-7, 18, King Hezekiah was told that he was sick and would die due to his illness. He prays to God to be healed. The Lord heals him, but Hezekiah is told to receive medical treatment to be healed. God worked to bring healing to Hezekiah through the laws of nature.

- In Acts 27, Paul is on a ship headed for Rome. He had desired to see the brethren for some time (Romans 1:9-10). He has prayed that he would be able to see them and asked the brethren in Rome to join him in praying that he would see them (Romans 15:32-30-32). God providentially brings Paul to Rome, as Paul's life was spared when a Jewish mob was bent on killing him, and he was sent to Caesarea by night (Acts 23:31-ff). For two years, Paul was imprisoned in Caesarea. Paul uses his right as a Roman citizen to appeal his case to Caesar (Acts 25:11). On the journey to Rome, the ship is caught in a terrible storm and suffers a shipwreck, but lives are spared (Acts 27:24). Finally, Paul arrives in Rome. Is this mere chance or the providence of God? Paul writes to the church at Philippi about the things that have occurred and says, "I want you to know, brethren, that the things which happened to me have actually turned out for the furtherance of the gospel" (Philippians 1:12). There is no doubt that Paul suffered many things, but God was working to bring to pass the opportunity for Paul to preach the gospel in Rome.

We know that God acted and worked in each circumstance in the examples above, but we do not know-how. Just because we do not understand how God works does not negate that He is working.

The providence of God is when He is working through nature to work out the result He desires. How thankful we should be that God works today through nature, men, and other natural means to bring to pass what He desires and the good things for those who love Him.

Love One Another

Lawrence Kelley

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another. No one has seen God at any time. If we love one another, God abides in us, and His love has been perfected in us" – (1 John 4:11-12)

From before the creation of the world, God is love. Love existed before any people were here to be loved. But doesn't love require an object? For love to exist there must be someone to give and another to receive. Christians understand that the Father and Son have been bound together by the Spirit in love from before all worlds.

God's love for us is the basis upon which we are exhorted to love each other. So, what is God's love like? It is lavish, it is extravagant, it is passionate, it is wide open. He withholds nothing that serves our best interest. I mean, look at the world around you! Clearly, God gives with wild abandon. "But," we say, "He can afford to give, it's easy for Him." Is that true? How many Son's did He have? Was sacrificing Him easy?

We need to follow God's example of loving others and become more generous givers. Furthermore, we need to do so with greater passion. I recently ran across this observation, "When the bland lead the bland, they will both fall into apathy." The greatest problem with God's people today is a lack of zeal. Peter exhorts us in this way, "Since you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit in sincere love of the brethren, love one another fervently with a pure heart" (1 Peter 1:22).

Here are a few ways you can show your love for your brother this week:

- Call a friend you know to be having a difficult time and invite them to lunch.
- Introduce yourself to a new member at church and find out if they have any needs as newcomers that you can meet.
- Visit an elderly member who is confined to their home or nursing facility.
- Write a check to someone that you know is having a financial struggle.
- Let your children's Bible class teachers know that you appreciate the influence they are having in their lives.
