What Must We Do To Be Saved?

Harold Hancock

Jesus answered the question, “What must I do to be saved?” in the Great Commission. The Great Commission was some of Jesus' final instructions to His apostles before He ascended back to Heaven. In this commission, Jesus told His apostles where they were to go, what they were to preach, and who would be saved. He told them, “Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:15,16). Could Jesus have answered the question, “What must I do to be saved?” any plainer? Jesus' answer to the question, “What must I do to be saved?” is believe and be baptized.

The apostles began to carry out the Great Commission on the first Pentecost after the resurrection and ascension of Jesus (Acts 2). Peter's sermon is recorded for us. He preached that Jesus was approved of God, crucified, and raised from the dead (Acts 2:22-24), and that it was the Christ whom the prophets had foretold would be resurrected (Acts 2:25-35). He then emphatically proclaimed “...God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ” (Acts 2:36). Some who heard Peter speak were pricked in their hearts and asked, “What shall we do?” (Acts 2:37). Peter answered, “Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:38). Notice, when some heard, and obviously, believed, they were instructed to be baptized in the name of the Lord for the remission of sins. Everything spoken in the Great Commission was coming to pass; the apostles preached the gospel as they had been told to do, and people were saved by believing and being baptized.

The book of Acts records numerous instances of the apostles or others preaching the gospel. People who heard the gospel and wanted to be saved believed and were baptized. For instance, “Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them...When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women” (Acts 8:5,12).

MARKET STREET MESSENGER

Philip, also, preached Jesus to the eunuch. As they came to a certain water, the eunuch said, "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Philip answered the eunuch, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." When the eunuch confessed Jesus Christ as the Son of God, they stopped the chariot in which they were riding, and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and Philip baptized him (Acts 8:35-38). A woman named Lydia heard Paul preach. After listening carefully to the things Paul said, she was baptized (Acts 16:14,15). A Philippian jailer asked Paul and Silas, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" They told him, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." They then spoke to him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. The same hour of the night, the jailer and those who were in his household were baptized, "straightway" (Acts 16:25-33). Throughout the book of Acts, those who wanted to be saved did what Jesus said do in the Great Commission to be saved- they believed and were baptized.

Those who were saved were added to the church (Acts. 2:47) and were called Christians (Acts 11:26). This church was not a denomination. Jesus built one church (Matthew 16:18; Ephesians 4:4), not many. The saved should not seek to be a part of a denomination and should wear no name but Christ's name (1 Corinthians 1:10-12).

If you want to be saved, you, too, must believe and be baptized. This is what Jesus said do in the Great Commission (Mark 16:16); it was the message preached by Peter on the first Pentecost after Jesus' resurrection (Acts 2:22-38) and by other apostles and faithful preachers of the gospel.

It Is Really Greener

Adam Shanks

You've heard the expression, "The grass is greener on the other side of the fence." Have you ever thought about why that is?

While it might be getting too late for this now, since much of our grass is starting to go dormant, it is amazing that the phenomenon is true. If you stand in the middle of your yard and look straight down at your feet, you will find that the grass does not look as nice as the grass on the other side of the fence. According to all appearances, it really is greener.

The truth is, this all comes from your perspective. When you look straight down, you see not only grass, but you will see the dirt beneath the grass. What you expect to be a full panorama of green is green mixed in with brown. If you look at grass from a distance through, and from the side, all you see is the green of the grass with no view of the brown dirt beneath. This truly makes grass look greener on the other side of the fence. It is not a true look at reality but an issue of perspective.

This is also how life works. We tend to look at life "straight down." We see the green with the brown. Or maybe put simpler, we see the good and the bad. This is how our lives seem to us.

But when we look at someone else's life, we see only the green. Some have said about Facebook that we should be careful not to compare our day to day with other's "highlight reels." We see our good: including our families, our homes, our jobs, our hobbies, our church, etc. We also see our bad. We know our families are blessings, but we see the day to day frustrations of kids misbehaving, or spouses who do not give us enough attention, or kids underperforming in school, or children who misbehave and disobey. We recognize God has blessed us with nice homes, but we also see the dishes in the sink, the laundry needing folded, the yard unmown, the windows unwashed, and the walls needing paint. We know our jobs are blessings, but we have an overbearing boss, or annoying coworkers, or too much to do in too little time. We love our hobbies, but they get too expensive or too time consuming to do them enough to truly enjoy them. We love our church family, but we get frustrated with the worship, the leadership, or the classes.

The truth is that it is all a matter of perspective. Our families are incredible blessings. That's it! End of story. We are done. There's no downside. There's no dirt. There's no comparing it with others. The truth is that all families have their own dirt to deal with. So do all jobs, all hobbies, all homes, and all churches. Everywhere you look, when you finally get to stand there and look down, you will see dirt along with the beautiful, lush, green grass.

There is no magic solution. All there is for you is water and fertilizer. If you want greener grass, take care of the grass you have been blessed with. Spend some time caring for those blessings and what God make them even better. Then you will find yourself standing in the perfect place, with all you ever wanted, without ever having moved.

“If we live by the Spirit, let us also keep in step with the Spirit. Let us not become conceited, provoking one another, envying one another” (Galatians 5.25-26).

Inexplicable Beauty

Bryan Matthew Dockens

“The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament shows His handiwork” (Psalm 19:1). Of many evidences for God’s existence, there is beauty. And this, evolutionary theory cannot account for.

While beauty serves to attract mates in sexual reproduction, it has no other perceptible benefit to survival. Outside procreation, any appreciation for aesthetics is materially functionless. A purely naturalistic approach fails to explain man’s awe at a golden sunset, his rapt attention to a colorful rainbow, his simple fascination with shimmering dewdrops on blades of grass, or his imaginative devotion to puffs of white cloud.

Nor can a Darwinistic mindset make sense of man’s appreciation for beauty in the unnatural handiwork of his fellow man. Splashes of paint on canvas serve no evolutionary good, yet man is pleased to pay admission and stand in line to observe such in a museum. Architects are favored not for function but for form.

Beauty itself points to a God who created it for its own purpose.
